Read the passage below and choose A, B, C or D to fill in each blank from 631 to 635.

The invention of the mobile phone has undoubtedly revolutionized the way people communicate and influenced every aspect of our lives. The issue is whether this technological innovation has done more harm than good. (631) _____, we must first turn to the types of consumers.

Presumably, most parents are always worrying about their children's safety and buy mobile phones for them to track their whereabouts. We can also assume that most teenagers want mobile phones to avoid missing out on social contact. In this context, the advantages are clear. However, we cannot deny the fact that text messages have been used by bullies to intimidate fellow students. There is also (632) _____evidence that texting has affected literacy skills.

The widespread use of mobile phone has, out of question, affected adult consumers too. What employee, on the way home from work, would be reluctant to answer a call from their boss? Apparently, only 18% of us, according to a survey, are willing to switch off our mobile phones (633)_____.

Admittedly, mobile phones can be intrusive but there are obvious benefits to possessing one. Personally speaking, they are invaluable when it comes to (634) _____ social or business arrangements at short notice. They also provide their owners with a sense of security in emergency situations.

In conclusion, mobile phones do have their drawbacks, but these are (635) _____ by the benefits. I would argue that it is not the tool that chooses its purpose, but the user.

Read the passage below and choose A, B, C or D to answer each question from 636 to 640.

Our climate is changing, but how we experience this is through our weather, with more frequent and intense heatwaves, and fewer cold spells. In contrast to 2024, June 2023 was the hottest on record, marked by an unprecedented marine heatwave around the UK and Ireland. The hottest five days in the UK since 1910, have all occurred in the past five years. Such a rapid rate of warming means we have come to normalise extreme heat, while relatively cold or even average conditions feel unusual and thus newsworthy.

When we experience a cold period, it is harder to picture the effects of extreme heat and acting on climate change feels less urgent. Notably, climate change has featured little in the 2024 election campaign. Perhaps that would have been different had the UK been experiencing 40°C, as it did two years ago. However, while the UK was relatively cool in early June, the US, Mexico and Greece all suffered deadly heatwaves, and more than 1,300 pilgrims died enduring unprecedented heat in Saudi Arabia.

Public normalisation of hotter temperatures may also affect our perception of climate change and thus our willingness to act on it. Ecologists describe a phenomenon called "shifting baseline syndrome", which is the idea that as the environment degrades, each new generation accepts the degraded situation they experience as normal. This also applies to climate change, as people forget or have no experience of the climate in the not-too-distant past.

TAILIEUONTHI.ORG

TaiLieuOnThi Tải tài liệu free tại Tailieuonthi.org tuduy.vn

On the other side, the changing climate, with more frequent and intense heatwaves, has severe effects even in the relatively mild UK. While heatwaves are often depicted with "fun in the sun" pictures, extreme heat affects the most vulnerable in society. The UK government calculates that around 3,000 extra deaths occurred in summer 2022 due to heatwaves. Heat also affects public services by damaging roads, disrupting the rail network and putting a strain on fire departments through wildfires.

While we continue to burn fossil fuels, releasing carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, the planet will continue to warm. Consequently, recent warm summers such as 2022 may feel average or even cool by the middle of this century. To avoid the normalisation of extreme and potentially life-threatening weather events, scientists have a responsibility to inform the public about how our climate is changing.

(Adapt from https://theconversation.com/)

Câu 636:

C. Humans are major factors contributing to climate change.

D. The normalization of extreme weather impacts long-term climate trends.

Read the passage below and choose A, B, C or D to answer each question from 641 to 645.

Do you feel like your teenager is spending most of the day glued to a phone screen? You're not too far off. A new survey from the Pew Research Center reveals the surprising ways that technology intersects with teen friendships - and the results show that 57 percent of teens have made at least one new friend online. Even more surprisingly, only 20 percent of those digital friends ever meet in person. While teens do connect with their friends face-to-face outside of school, they spend 55 percent of their day texting with friends, and only 25 percent of teens are spending actual time with their friends on a daily basis. These new forms of communication are key in maintaining friendships day-to-day - 27 percent of teens instant message their friends every day, 23 percent connect through social media every day, and 7 percent even video chat daily. Text messaging remains the main form of communication - almost half of the survey respondents say it's their chosen method of communication with their closest friend.

While girls are more likely to text with their close friends, boys are meeting new friends and maintaining friendships) in the gaming world - 89 percent play with friends they know, and 54 percent play with online-only friends. Whether they're close with their teammates or not, online gamers say that playing makes them feel "more connected" to friends they know or gamers they've never met.

When making new friends, social media has also become a major part of the teenage identity - 62 percent of teens are quick to share their social media usernames when connecting with a new friend. Despite the negative consequences, 21 percent of teenage users feel worse about their lives because of posts they see on social media - teens also have found support and connection through various platforms. In fact, 68 percent of teens received support during a challenging time in their lives via social media platforms.

Just as technology has become a gateway for new friendships, or a channel to stay connected with current friends, it can also make a friendship breakup more public. The study reveals that girls are more likely to block or unfriend former allies, and 68 percent of all teenage users report experiencing "drama among their friends on social media."

Câu 641:

What can be inferred from the first paragraph according to the new survey?

A. More than half of teens form close friendships online, but rarely meet in person.

B. Text messaging is the preferred method of communication for 23% of teens.

C. More than 10% of teens chat through video every day.

D. Only 20% of teens use digital platforms to stay in touch with friends.

Câu 642:

What does the word "they" in paragraph 3 refer to?

A. friends B. teenage users C. their teammates D. online-only friends

Câu 643:

Which of the following best paraphrases this sentence: “Whether they're close with their teammates or not, online gamers say that playing makes them feel "more connected" to friends they know or gamers they've never met.”?

A. Online gamers feel more connected to both friends and strangers through gaming, regardless of their relationship.

B. Playing online games makes gamers feel more connected to both their teammates and other players, even if they don't know them.

C. Gamers feel a stronger connection with their teammates and other players they meet online, who they might know.
