It is estimated that by 2050 more than two-thirds of the world's population will live in cities, up from about 54 percent today. While the many benefits of organized and efficient cities are well understood, we need to recognize that this rapid, often unplanned urbanization brings risks of profound social instability, risks to critical infrastructure, potential water crises and the potential for devastating spread of disease. These risks can only be further exacerbated as this unprecedented transition from rural to urban areas continues.

How effectively these risks can be addressed will increasingly be determined by how well cities are governed. The increased concentration of people, physical assets, infrastructure and economic activities mean that the risks materializing at the city level will have far greater potential to disrupt society than ever before.

Urbanization is by no means bad by itself. It brings important benefits for economic, cultural and societal development. Well managed cities are both efficient and effective, enabling economies of scale and network effects while reducing the impact on the climate of transportation. As such, an urban model can make economic activity more environmentally-friendly. Further, the proximity and diversity of people can spark innovation and create employment as exchanging ideas breeds new ideas.

But these utopian concepts are threatened by some of the factors driving rapid urbanization. For example, one of the main factors is rural-urban migration, driven by the prospect of greater employment opportunities and the hope of a better life in cities. But rapidly increasing population density can create severe problems, especially if planning efforts are not sufficient to cope with the influx of new inhabitants. The result may, in extreme cases, be widespread poverty. Estimates suggest that 40% of the world's urban expansion is taking place in slums, exacerbating socio-economic disparities and creating unsanitary conditions that facilitate the spread of disease.

The Global Risks 2015 Report looks at four areas that face particularly daunting challenges in the face of rapid and unplanned urbanization: infrastructure, health, climate change, and social instability. In each of these areas we find new risks that can best be managed or, in some cases, transferred through the mechanism of insurance.

Câu 636:

What risks are associated with rapid and unplanned urbanization according to paragraph 1?

A. Improved economic growth, increased agricultural output, and cultural exchange.

B. Profound social instability, risks to critical infrastructure, potential water crises, and the spread of disease.

C. Greater access to technology, enhanced public transportation, and reduced energy consumption.

D. Decreased population density, better living conditions, and more green spaces in urban areas.

Câu 637:

What is mentioned about employment in paragraph 3?

A. Well-managed cities create employment by fostering innovation through idea exchange.

B. Urbanization leads to job creation primarily through environmental sustainability efforts.

C. Employment rates decline in cities as urbanization leads to overcrowding and fewer resources.

D. While urbanization fosters cultural development, it has little effect on employment rates.

Câu 638:

What is NOT mentioned as one of severe results due to rapid urbanization according to paragraph 4?

A. Socio-economic disparities decrease as population density increases in cities.

B. Diseases are caused by people migrating to cities.

C. The flow of new citizens puts pressure on healthcare services and environmental qualities.

D. Poverty may be a foregone conclusion of unplanned urbanization.

Câu 639:

What does the word “that" in paragraph 4 refer to?

A. urban expansion

B. socio-economic disparities

C. disease

D. unsanitary conditions

Câu 640:

Which of the following would the author most likely support?

A. Rapid urbanization should be encouraged without any planning to foster economic growth.

B. Addressing the challenges of rapid urbanization requires a comprehensive approach involving insurance mechanisms.

C. Urbanization has no significant impact on infrastructure and social stability in developing countries.

D. The risks associated with urbanization can be ignored as they do not affect overall development.

Read the passage below and choose A, B, C or D to answer each question from 641 to 645.

As customers choose brands based on how they make them feel, rather than their actual products or services, there is an intrinsic advantage to those organizations who use designed experiences as a weapon to cut through the most competitive of markets. Those that don't, operate in what we call the “experience gap”, the space between them and their customer's expectation of them. Make no mistake, in our high paced and digitally connected economies, the experience gap is driving markets, fast.

TAILIEUONTHI.ORG

For example, take Instagram and Twitter. These brands filled the demand for a whole new human experience that did not exist before the evolution of digital technologies enabled that. They were pioneers, and there were no established players to unseat. But we are also seeing a similar dynamic in existing industries. New entrants are coming in and taking the space, also using whole new experiences, purely because the incumbents left the door open.

Closer to home, this can be seen with Australian neobanks who are giving customers a better experience than the incumbents. Robert Bell is the CEO at neobank 86400. He says banking has already become quite complicated and he wanted to make a change. His neobank is working to solve customers' problems more holistically. Bell said, "It's significantly harder work and takes more time to become a bank, but having done that we can have a much better relationship with our customers and we can offer them a lot more products and services."

Think about that for a moment. Do you notice how better experiences, leads to better relationships, which is then the stepping stone for more offerings? Many brands still jump straight to modified offerings, without gaining that customer connection and the necessary foundation of trust first.
